Bill Burr talks standup, West Virginia, “Breaking Bad”

By ZACH HAUGHT
THE PARTHENON

Bill Burr will take the stage at the Keith-Albee Theatre Wednesday for a night of unrated comedy that is not for the easily offended.

“I’m just sort of that guy you meet at a bar who makes sense for about 20 minutes, and then you figure out that I kind of almost flunked everything in high school and you just sort of laugh at me,” Burr said.

Burr said he is excited to visit West Virginia on his tour, despite the negative perception the state has.

“I think it’s a beautiful state and it really gets a bad rap,” Burr said. “The way everybody has trashed it, I thought I was going to go there and it was going to be like a junkyard, but it wasn’t. It’s gorgeous.”

Even though his most recent special “You People Are All the Same” was released last year, Burr said he has a completely new routine ready for the next one.

“I could shoot it tomorrow,” Burr said. “Well, probably not tomorrow, but in a month if I wanted to.”

Burr said he believes in leaving enough time for a project to use all of its momentum.

“It’d be like if you owned a store and you put the locations too close together,” Burr said. “It’s like the store is competing with itself”

Finding the fine line between giving fans what they want and leaving them wanting more is one that Burr said he tries to balance.

“You don’t want to be out there too much, but you don’t want people to forget about you,” Burr said. “You try to be out there without being annoying, but no matter what you end up annoying people anyway.”

Burr has most recently been seen portraying Patrick Kuby on AMC’s “Breaking Bad.” With only three episodes remaining, Burr was cryptic on whether or not viewers have seen the last of his character.

A “Breaking Bad” spinoff for character Saul Goodman, Kuby’s boss, has been discussed, but nothing is confirmed.

“If something happens, I would love to do it,” Burr said. “If not, it was awesome to be a small, small part of the show.”

Memorial bell tower unveiled at Springhill

By BRITANY MILLER
THE PARTHENON

Springhill Cemetery unveiled the new memorial bell tower in a ceremony Wednesday to honor the victims of several different tragedies and memorialize their local impact.

For the unveiling, a crowd of nearly 250 gathered just above the Healing Field, an annual display featuring some 3,000 American flags, each honoring a lost loved one.

The dedication featured several keynote speakers, including Mayor Steve Williams and Kenneth Ambrose, father of the late Ambrose.

Ambrose concluded his speech by saying the tower serves not only as a means of remembrance, but also as a challenge for each person to grow from their loss.

“Whatever I do that is good, I am going to do better,” Ambrose said, quoting an earlier work by his late son. “However much I care, I am going to care more.”

The dedication also featured a tribute by the Huntington High Marching band, the Honor Guard ceremony and performances by members of Marshall University’s choir, followed by refreshments.

At the ceremony’s end, Ambrose and his wife Sharon were invited to remove the bell’s sheath for its first ringing in the tune of “God Bless America.”

Kevin Brady, executive director of the Greater Huntington Parks and Recreation District, expressed his delight with the turnout and ceremony.

“I am so amazed and impressed and humbled by the people that were here, those that stood,” Brady said. “It was a long ceremony, but it was lovely, absolutely incredible. I’m almost speechless.”

The 500 pound bronze bell features four separate images. A depiction of the Veteran’s Memorial Arch honors local military; the Pentagon insignia honors victims of 9/11, including Huntington native, Dr. Paul Ambrose; the Marshall plane crash memorial is featured; and finally, an image of the Healing Field unites them all.

The bell will now ring every hour, on the hour from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

The tower is located along the Springhill memorial section of the Paul Ambrose Trail for Health within feet of Ambrose’s gravesite and the Marshall plane crash memorial.

SRC to host fair Tuesday

By MASON BEUHRING
THE PARTHENON

While seniors and juniors have the familiar feeling of settling into a new schedule, while freshman and sophomores may see the adjustment as foreign. Students who are experiencing stress or anxiety should not fret, because there is a simple solution.

The Marshall University Student Resource Center will host the third biannual Student Resource Fair, Tuesday in the first floor lobby of the Memorial Student Center from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

The fair will give students information on the different resources that are offered to students, and will showcase multiple programs available on campus. These programs include the SRC and the resources that are offered there as well as Counseling Services, Campus Activities, Greek Life, Tutoring Services, Career Services, The Help Center, Residence Life, Veterans Affairs, Student Health and many others. Each of these programs will have their own separate table set up to give students the information about the resources offered to them.

“Anything that students will need outside of the classroom, we are inviting all of these entities and programs into one central location so that students can come and figure out what we have to offer,” said Matthew James, SRC senior resource specialist.

During the Resource Fair, the SRC will give information on its upcoming series of workshops for students, along with a list of events that the SRC will host said Michelle Barbour, SRC career advisor.

The Resource Fair takes place near the third week of school so students can understand what resources the need.

“So, we give them a few weeks to make themselves at home on campus, learn what college life is and then identify the needs they have and what sources we have to answer those needs,” James said.

A crowd at Pullman Square in Huntington for the 28th annual Chilifest on Sept. 17, 2011.

By CHARLIE HOUSE
THE PARTHENON

Chili fans from across the region will converge on Pullman Square in downtown Huntington Saturday for the 30th annual Chilifest.

The daylong festival, which benefits Ronald McDonald House Charities of the Tri-State, features the West Virginia State Chili Championship and various competitions and entertainment. The festival starts at 11 a.m., and more than 20,000 people are expected to attend.

The championship draws chili cooks from across the east coast and the midwest to compete in the salsa, chili verde and traditional red chili categories. Judging begins at 12:10 p.m., and winners will be announced at 5:30 p.m. at the Pullman Square stage.

Local groups will also compete in the People’s Choice category, and can win by raising the most money for the Ronald McDonald House through chili sample ticket sales.

Chilifest has raised more than $500,000 for the Ronald McDonald House through the years.

Scheduled entertainment on the Pullman Square stage includes Chris Sutton, from noon to 12:45 p.m. and City Heat, from 2:45 to 3:30 p.m. and again from 4:30 to 5:20 p.m.

Other festivities include the Hot Pepper Eating contest at 1 p.m., the Beer Drinking Contest at 3:40 p.m. and the Shot N’ Holler Contest at 4 p.m.

Backyard Pizza offers a unique menu with a rustic flair

By GEOFFREY FOSTER
THE PARTHENON

Most American pizza parlors usually offer a familiar trio of items: pizza, subs and wings. There are variations of this custom, but such variations don’t tend to deviate much from that basic formula. So, when a pizza restaurant offers something different, people tend to notice.

Backyard Pizza and Raw Bar is one such restaurant. Drew Hetzer, the owner of Backyard Pizza and Raw Bar, has designed a unique menu that pairs specialty pizzas with seafood.

“When I was doing my research on what kind of food would work around town, I discovered that pizza and seafood are the most popular here,” Hetzer said. “If you can get seafood really fresh, there is a high demand for it and we get our stuff special ordered so we can provide that fresh product to people in Huntington. Also, we are one of only two pizza and raw bars in the whole country.”

Backyard Pizza and Raw Bar is located at 841 Fourth Avenue, a location that holds a special significance for Hetzer.

“My mom worked here for nine years, when it was Chili Willi’s,” Hetzer said. “Whenever she couldn’t find a babysitter, she would bring me and my sister to work with her. I became very familiar with the business, and I have always been very comfortable around people. It’s just something I grew up with and love doing.”

From that point forward, Hetzer’s passion for the food industry continued to blossom. He started working at Heritage Station restaurant, moved on to Marshall Hall of Fame Cafe and later, 21 at the Frederick. Along the way, he learned not only how to cook, but how to manage a business. He also discovered that a successful cook does not need a culinary degree to design a menu that appeals to a multitude of people.

“I’ve had the privilege of working with some amazing chefs,” Hetzer said. “Also, my wife is amazing as well. She actually created the dough recipe. I don’t think anyone here has a culinary degree, we’re just very passionate about what we do and that’s what it takes to be successful.”

ANDREA STEELE | THE PARTHENON

Backyard Pizza and Raw Bar, located at 841 Fourth Avenue, is a Huntington restaurant that offers fresh food and unique pizzas.

One thing that sets Backyard Pizza apart from other restaurants is not only the dishes it offers, but also the preparation methods employed to make them.

“We devote a lot of time and dedication to our dishes,” Hetzer said. “If it’s on the menu, it is above and beyond. We make everything from scratch. We make our dough fresh every day, our sauces are made with all fresh ingredients and 80 to 85 percent of our produce is local. We also use a wood fire oven imported from Italy. I like cooking very traditional and rustic dishes.”

While Hetzer’s cooking experience in Huntington inspired several items on the menu, a recent trip to Italy sparked a few more.

“It was great to explore abroad and discover different styles of cooking,” Hetzer said. “Everything there is very fresh. We had the opportunity to consult with some chefs and they actually let us cook in their kitchens.”

In addition to 21 specialty pizzas, the menu also includes 10 seafood items, seven appetizers and several desserts. Aside from the sauces, everything is cooked in the wood fire oven. The restaurant also has a food truck available for catering, festivals and events. Like the restaurant, it also has a wood fire oven. Backyard Pizza and Raw Bar is open Tuesday through Thursday for lunch and dinner, Friday and Saturday 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. and a brunch menu is served Sundays from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

COMICS

Before visitors even have the opportunity to browse, one thing will become readily apparent: Even though the store has a loyal customer base, newcomers are always graciously welcomed.

“Aside from the New Comic discounts generally given, there are many advantages to becoming a regular, loyal customer,” Horst said. “I give away promo cards, comics, bookmarks and other collectibles all the time to those I recognize.”

However, Purple Earth is not just some place to buy comics and collectibles. To many customers, it is something much more.

“In a nutshell, Purple Earth Comics is a sanctuary for those who like story,” Horst said. “It is a haven for anyone who has ever been seen as a geek or a nerd. It is an alternate earth that is your shade of entertainment. The real mother earth is stunning in its beauty and complexity. It is also overwhelming in its shocking seriousness. Purple Earth is a world far from the one we know.”

What is your fondest childhood memory?

Going to work with my dad. He was a Marine, and he always took me to his office with him.

If you were stranded on an island, what three things would you bring?

Food, duct tape (it was on Myth Busters) and Michael Phelps to swim me home.

What is your biggest fear?

Losing the people closest to me.

What is your all-time favorite Disney movie?

“The Lion King.”

If you were to audition for American Idol, what song would you sing?

“The Scientist” by Coldplay, but trust me, you don’t want to hear me sing anything.

What is one thing you can’t live without?

My faith in Jesus Christ.

If you could live anywhere in the world, where would it be?

Hawaii. I used to live there as a kid, and would give anything to move there now.

What’s one word that describes you?

Determined.

What is your goal this season?

Win a C-USA championship!

“Friday the 13th” franchise that have been released on its title date.

This Friday the 13th sees the release of “Insidious: Chapter 2,” a ghost movie about a family that is haunted by a demon that refuses to leave.

The movie is a sequel to 2011’s “Insidious,” a movie that became the most profitable movie of 2011, making $11 million in the box office on a budget of just $1.5 million. If the first movie is anything to go on, this new feature will have moviegoers everywhere jumping out of their seats.

BURR

Burr said this role in “Breaking Bad” has paved the way for other dramatic roles on the horizon, including his role as a lawyer in the upcoming Kevin Costner film “Black and White.”

“I’m just happy because Vince Gilligan gave me a shot on ‘Breaking Bad,’ people saw that I can do some drama,” Burr said. “I’m getting 50-50, like some funny stuff, some dramatic stuff.”

Burr also runs the successful “Bill Burr’s Monday Morning Podcast” and is working on a mature cartoon, but is reluctant to give details until it gets a television deal.

Burr will perform Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are now on sale at Marshall University’s box office in the Joan C. Edwards Performing Arts Center or Ticketmaster.com.

Tickets are $5 for full-time Marshall students and $25 for the public. All seating is general admission.

Fantasy football: week 2

By RYAN DORFMAN
COLUMNIST
Week One Recap

Yesterday is a mystery, tomorrow is a mystery. With week one in the books, week two is now my focus.

We can complain all we want about performances in week one-to all of you who started Zach Sudfeld, I feel your pain. Nevertheless, complaining about week one is not going to help us achieve victory in week two.

Just a tidbit regarding Marshall alumni, Ahmad Bradshaw tallied up 26 rushing yards on seven attempts and Vinny Curry recorded nine tackles.

Injury Report

I always like to begin with assessing injuries, and on that note, Tony Romo owners should be very cautious. Romo bruised his ribs in Sunday’s game. He did return and an MRI confirms there was not a fracture.

I would continue to check on his status throughout the week, however, and look at picking up Terrelle Pryor (available in 89 percent of leagues), who played great in week one and has a very easy matchup against the Jaguars next week, who just got torched by the Chiefs.

Speaking of the Chiefs, Jamaal Charles owners do not need to worry, as his quad injury was only a fluke and he should be good to go for next week against Dallas.

Shane Vereen suffered a broken wrist on Sunday and underwent surgery Monday. I suggest you do NOT drop him, as he is worth stashing on your bench. He will miss at least four weeks.

More news on the Patriots,

Danny Amendola, who injured his groin on Sunday, was very limited in practice on Monday, so Amendola owners may want to explore the waiver wire this week.

Reggie Bush should be good to go next week after dislocating his thumb and injuring his groin on Sunday. Bush had a historic game last week, as he was the first Lions player with 90 rushing yards and 100 receiving yards in a game since Barry Sanders in 1990.

Now, as for all of you Dez Bryant owners, an MRI taken on Monday showed that Bryant has a mild foot sprain, and he is still expected to play next week against the Chiefs.

Waiver Wire

I have seen Kellen Winslow’s name come up a lot regarding waiver wire pickups, but I do not encourage picking him up. The Jets are playing the Patriots next week, which allowed only 38 receiving yards to the Bills’ tight end last week.

Jerome Simpson is a good pickup. He matches up against the Bears this week, which gave up 282 receiving yards and two touchdowns to wide receivers last week.

Julian Edelman is also a good pickup and matches up against the Jets this week. The Jets gave up 210 receiving yards and one touchdown to wide receivers last week.

Julius Thomas is an amazing pickup if you need help at tight end. He matches up against the Giants this week. The Giants gave up 70 receiving yards and two touchdowns to tight ends last week.
